Yolt, the smart thinking money app, has today announced it has become the first third-party provider (TTP) to successfully complete Application Programming Interface (API) connections under the new Open Banking regulation with nine of the biggest high street banks in the UK.

Combined with challenger banks Monzo and Starling, there are now 18 banks connected through APIs, with users granted access to a total of 35 different banks and cards. Currently performing around 1.5million calls every week to Open Banking APIs, Yolt is the biggest user of these interfaces, cementing its status as the leading TTP in Open Banking.

Yolt enables users to view their bank accounts and credit cards in one smart place. With key features including auto-categorisation, easy budget setting and a spending tracker, users are empowered
